

The Drowned Lands

Atlantis, Lemuria & Mu, Real or Make Believe?

A weekend workshop with Dolores Ashcroft Nowicki
September 17, 18, & 19, 2010

For centuries the discussion about the reality of Atlantis has raged both for and against. More books about its surmised position have been written than any other mystery of the past. It has been placed in the Mediterranean, the Caribbean, off the Bahamas, and West Africa and even the South Pole. Certainly there are some very good theories out there and in this workshop we will be looking at them and assessing them.

Many psychics, some of them notable in their time have given their impressions of how it would have looked, how its people would have dressed, behaved, worshipped etc.

Atlantis was not the only land lost to the Sea. The Pacific also has its mysteries in the tales of Lemuria and Mu. While Atlantis has cornered the market of books, films and TV, the myriad islands of the Pacific offers slightly more tangible evidence of a once great continent that, like its Atlantic sister was lost to the sea.

While the legends of Atlantis tell of a high level of technology and the sacred science of magic, Mu and Lemuria speak of decadence, cruelty, war, destruction and cannibalism.

What can we make of these tales? We can look at the evidence of similar cultures, symbols, language, religious practices and try to make sense of them. We can create images and fill them with our own trained mind power and try to make them live again, long enough to perhaps give us some clues as to their ultimate fate and its cause.

This is not the usual workshop, it is an investigation by psychics, magicians, clairvoyants working with their trained senses to cast some light on the past.

We will of course have the usual Saturday ritual, this one taken from the workshop of "Within the Temple of Atlantis" The Marriage of the Sun and the Moon.

Come with me on a magical archeological 'dig' and see what we can learn.

The price is $150.

For additional info go to <http://circulo-dorado.org/circulo/>

You will need robes for the ritual. Black for the women and white for the men.